THE TRAIL BLAZERS IN A WHIRLWIND WESTERN!!!

Has Western Background

Bob Steele had fine training for his present career as a motion picture cowboy star.

Steele comes to the ..... theatre on ..... in "Arizona Whirlwind," the thrilling Monogram "Trail Blazers" western drama in which he is featured with Hoot Gibson and Ken Maynard.

Even while he was attending high school in Southern California, Bob and his brother were enthusiastic hunters and trappers, and during this period played the leading roles in a long series of short films dealing with these outdoor pursuits. Bob spent his summer vacations in such rugged jobs as iceman and life guard, while he spent much of his time on the San Fernando Valley ranch of his parents. At one time in his youth he was a professional boxer, and thus learned all the rudiments of the screen fighting in which he was to take part in later life. And even now he spends his time "between pictures" at his parents' ranch, or uses his cabin in the California mountains as a base for hunting expeditions.

"Arizona Whirlwind" was produced and directed by Robert Tansey.

"ARIZONA WHIRLWIND" FAST DRAMA OF WESTERN FRONTIER

(Review)

A swiftly moving story and much fast action mark "Arizona Whirlwind," the Monogram "Trail Blazers" western drama which opened an engagement at the theatre last night. There are thrills galore, and many dramatic situations which are filled with suspense.

Hoot Gibson, Ken Maynard and Bob Steele are featured as a trio of crusading cowboys, and this popular group have never been seen to better advantage. Ian Kieth is outstanding in a villainous role, and others in the cast who do good work are Myrna Dell, Don Stewart, Charlie Murray, Jr., Karl Hackett, George Chesebro, Charles King, Dan White and Frank Ellis. These constitute an exceptionally able cast of westerners.

The story finds Gibson, Maynard and Steele taking jobs as telegraph linemen near a western community in an effort to track down a gang of counterfeiters, and their subsequent battles with rascals masquerading as upright citizens. The climax involves additional excitement through the fact that a young boy (Don Stewart) faces suffocation in a vault in which he has been imprisoned by the gang.

As both producer and director, Robert Tansey has turned out a thoroughly satisfying picture in "Arizona Whirlwind," with all the elements of popular appeal to western fans. The original screenplay by Frances Kavanaugh is the basis of an absorbing film, and the photography of Edward Kull is excellent.

(Not for Publication)

The stagecoach running to Sonora has been set upon by Indians, and the Trail Blazers, Ken Maynard, Hoot Gibson and Bob Steele, manage to beat off the attackers and bring it into the relay station. Bob drives the stagecoach from the station to Sonora, and is again pounced upon by a band of outlaws. The Trail Blazers realize there is something of importance on the stagecoach, and search it, but find nothing. Lockwood, of the telegraph department, has been sent to Sonora to run in a line, and the Trail Blazers, to conceal their identity, take on jobs as linemen with him. Lynch, head of the local bank, and a gang of henchmen are working a counterfeiting racket of which Polini is the head, and the Trail Blazers are looking for the latter. The gangsters are ordered to do away with the Trail Blazers. Donny, a small boy and friend of the cowboys, and Ruth, who has come home from her teaching job, watch Lynch and the members of his gang hide counterfeit plates in a vault, as Bob rides off to warn Ken and Hoot of impending danger. Donny enters to get them. Ruth sees Lynch lock the door on the boy, rushes to the telegraph station and manages to get in touch with the Trail Blazers, who overcome their pursuers and make a dash for town. A gun battle ensues, and Ken finally gets the safe open just in time to rescue Donny from suffocation. Polini and the gang are apprehended.
